Read the back to learn how to Adopt A Teacher. Empower a teacher today!
Embrace your adopted teacher with lots of love and support! Unions have used fear, intimidation, isolation and ignorance to make teachers feel powerless, unappreciated, and dependent on unions. Your teacher needs to know he/she is not alone. Commit to standing with him/her for the long haul.

Educate your teacher by giving him/her Standing Up to Goliath, so he/she can read real stories about how the state and national unions abuse teachers, parents and kids and how they really spend teacher monies and misrepresent them. The unions will bully your teacher and undermine our truth with their deceptive messaging, so get educated, stand tall, and speak truth.

Enlighten your teacher to see beyond union messaging. The unions manipulate and control teachers and have monopoly control over teacher email and teacher mailboxes, so most teachers hear only the unions’ side of the story. There’s only one way to bring people out of darkness—turn on a light! Be that light!

Your adopted teacher might be too terrified to come out of the dark. He/she might be so beaten down and scared that standing up for truth, for the kids, for families, for our country, will seem far too risky. Many teachers believe they will lose their jobs and their pensions if they question unions, and they are bullied when they speak out in opposition to the narrow views of state and national unions, so they have every reason to feel afraid. Empathize and sympathize with their situation. Do not judge them.

Your adopted teacher is going to need a lot of reassurance and encouragement to even begin educating other teachers or taking a stand for good. Do not let your adopted teacher fight the battle alone. The teacher will likely not feel safe to ask others to stand behind him/her in support, so you need to gather up a band of brothers and sisters to stand with your brave teacher—especially on his/her school campus. Encouraged people get inspired, and they inspire others!

Finally, empower teachers to join together (with support of community members, parents, faith leaders, etc.) to break free of the entrenched power and deception of state and national unions. Help teachers to switch to “local only” associations, so we can restore authority in our schools and culture. Visit ForKidsAndCountry.org for programs and support.
